COLLEGE EDUCATED PUBLIC: This program is recommended for individuals who wish to add to their personal and professional knowledge and to improve their health and wellbeing. Participants will receive a certificate of completion for 6 hours.

Automatic responses to stressors depend not only on the perception of threat but also on appraisal of one's capability for coping with the stressor—a stress-resilient mindset.

In this updated 6-hour program, learn how positive mindsets promote long-term perseverance toward goals (grit), the belief that effort improves intelligence and talent (growth), and the recognition that long-term health and wellbeing are attainable (health).

Participants completing this 6-hour program should be able to:

- 1. Name several characteristics of fixed and growth mindsets.*
- 2. Describe how mindsets influence emotional and behavioral responses to challenges.*
- 3. List one or more strategies for managing mindsets that contribute to interpersonal relationships.*
- 4. Identify several evidence-based practices for developing a mindset that promotes personal growth, development, well-being, and fulfillment.*
